

Making new meaning: Noticing liminal moments as opportunities for change

This 2 day workshop, building on the TA 101, will deepen your understanding of how people can continue to make new meaning of who they are in the world. As agents of change, learn how to spot the key moments of potential development and use them to their full potential. There will be time for trying out the application of these tools and approaches with each other as well as time for self reflection. You will learn different ways of thinking about change with your clients, as well as exploring and deepening your relationship with yourself.

This workshop is suitable for people who work as change agents - coaches, educators, facilitators, consultants, counsellors. Having attended a TA 101 is a pre-requisite to register.

Topics include:

Working with liminality, understanding human hungers, using the Permission Wheel, noticing & working tangential & redefining transactions as clues to recognise moments of change, crossing the Transformation Line in Kolb's cycle, working with metaphor & image, exploring a new model of OKness, conceptualising developmental work as therapeutic (not therapy), experiencing the Mindful Adult.

This workshop carries 12 CCE Units (11 CC and 1 RD) from the ICF
